In the past seven days, I’ve learned:

- 7 ways to make a flight comfortable,
- 10 surprisingly free airline perks,
- 10 beaches that are better in the fall,
- How to navigate a tight airport connection,
- 10 dirty little secrets of frequent flyer programs,
- When the best time is to book holiday travel,
- 6 insanely cheap fall destinations,
- 10 secrets of ultra cheap travel,
- How to prevent lost or delayed bags at the airport,
- 10 places that should be on your bucket list,
- How airlines set prices for airfare, and
- What happens if you miss your connecting flight

Also, if you’re logged in to your account, you can search for low airfare on the site, and then SmarterTravel will send you an email with the day’s lowest airfares from the destination you’re starting from. It’s very helpful, because it means you don’t have to check airfare every day, they will just be emailed to you.

When you’ve already planned out your trip enough to know where you’re going, search your destination on SmarterTravel. You can learn tourist attractions, and learn some interesting things you didn’t know about the city. For example, if you’re visiting Philadelphia, you can learn that the Mutter Museum, in Philadelphia, is one of the “world’s scariest places.”
