

Want to bike a portion of the San Francisco Bay?

Biking is a fun family activity, and when you pair it with the scenic San Francisco Bay, you can't go wrong! Here is some information provided by the Transportation Museum to help you plan your visit:

Is there a map of the trail?

baytrail.org/baytrailmap.html

Where should I begin?

We suggest starting off at the Public Parking Lot near Oracle. From Marine Parkway in Belmont, just east of 101, turn onto Oracle Parkway to go north. Then turn left at the first stop sign and park in the parking lot.

Which trail do I take?

From the Oracle Parking Lot, get on the trail and continue east (away from 101). Cross the bridge that comes up, and then turn right. The trail passes some office buildings and marshland. When you get to a fork and you see a park to your left, turn right. Continue on the trail through Foster City. You'll pass a park (a small strip of land) on your left. Eventually, you'll reach a baseball field. This is Sea Cloud Park and a good turning around point. By now, you will have biked approximately 2 miles (one way). If you're continuing, don't turn into the park; go straight on the trail. Feel free to take the elevated "mountain bike" trail just to the right of the pavement! At some points, there are some dirt areas to your right—feel free to diverge from the trail to have fun with these! The trail now winds along Beach Park Boulevard and eventually you'll reach the 92 Bridge. Just before the bridge, there is a park—Bridgeview Park. At this point, you've biked about 4.5 miles (one way). Continue along under the bridge and around Mariners Point. At the Seal Point Dog Park, you will bike along the street for a little bit. Pull into the Ryder Park parking lot and continue on the trail to Coyote Point. Wind through the park. At Coyote Point Drive, turn left. Cross the street and take the Bay Trail on the right side of the street. Continue to the right. You'll see a tan building, Tangent, and the trail now follows Airport Boulevard. When the trail dead-ends and Airport Boulevard curves to the left, follow Airport Boulevard. Just after the parking lot on Airport Boulevard past the Hilton, turn right. Immediately the trail forks, go to the left. Continue on the sidewalk to the right, along Anza Boulevard. When the street ends and there is a yellow bathroom, go on the trail just along the water to the left. Continue along the water (and Airport Boulevard, on the left) until you reach the Bayshore Highway stoplight. Turn left and cross 101 on a bike/pedestrian overcrossing path. The path comes out at Rollins Road. Congratulations, you have just biked 11.8 miles! Nice job!

For more information on other fun Bay Area things to do, visit thetransportationmuseum.com/things-to-do